

Nate Barlow Adapts Children's Fantasy Novel

July 17, 2009 by Sarah Hollender

Nate Barlow is adapting a children's fantasy novel into a screenplay for Kerouac Films. He initially met them via a social networking website, and spent a year and a half bouncing around ideas before settling on this one.

"The book we settled on adapting was something I tossed out as a "something like" example, never expecting that it would be the idea onto which they would latch!" says Nate. Nate studied electrical and computer engineering in college and worked an engineering job a little more than a year before moving to Los Angeles. "I've held a variety of positions in the industry, from acting to writing to directing/producing to crew to (currently) new media executive. I spent two years in East Africa as a boy when my father took a teaching job at the International School of Moshi. Such an experience shapes your life. I think my engineering background also gives me a different perspective on the industry." Plans for his future include a baby and one day he hopes to open his own winery. You can visit my Nate's personal website at <http://www.natebarlow.com>