

Hartford Courant

Sunday, November 12, 2006

Tales To Creep You Out

Nate Barlow, who grew up in Portland, has a new entry for his film resume.

“Tales From Beyond,” a film he co-directed starring Adam West (Batman on television), came out on DVD Oct. 24. It had been previewed at horror film festivals in 2004, and won awards at two of them.

West plays the owner of an antiquarian bookstore who, in helping a young couple searching for a gift book, introduces an anthology of four science fiction-fantasy stories. Each story had a different director. The others are Josh Austin, Eric Manning and Russell Scott.

—Donna Larcen

